THE GRAND JURY

Of Marshall County will Act on the Hixenbaugh Charge.

PRELIMINARY HEARING HELD

Yesterday Before Justice Criswell in Moundsville, who Holds the Prisoner. Habeas Corpus Proceedings will be Taken Before Judge Campbell in Wheeling To-day—Hixenbaugh Tells His Story—Other Testimony.

The preliminary hearing of Conductor William Hixenbaugh, of McMechen, who is accused of killing Adam Fisher last Sunday, while the latter was stealing a ride on his train, near Roseby's Rock, was held yesterday before Justice Criswell, in Moundsville. So many curious persons attended the examination that it was adjourned from the squire's office to the court-house.

Hixenbaugh was represented by Colonel W. W. Arnett, of this city, and Mr. B. F. Meighen, of Moundsville. The state's interests were cared for by Prosecuting Attorney T. J. Parsons, of Marshall county. The state introduced three witnesses, William Muldrew, J. L. Lowry and William Wade, who testified about as they did before the coroner on Monday, as detailed in Tuesday's Intelligence, except that they did not board the train at Moundsville, where Fisher, the victim of the tragedy, got on. They are residents of Roseby's Rock and got on at the water tank station and rode on the train to the top of the grade east of the village. They were on top of the car and saw the conductor strike Fisher over the head with his "brake club." They got off after the man had been run over by the cars. The two men with Fisher, who have not up to this time appeared in the case, got off before the trouble occurred.

The defense introduced but one witness and he was Hixenbaugh, the accused man. There were two other witnesses whom the defense intended to introduce in the hearing, but it was ascertained that they did not see the blow struck by Hixenbaugh, and were for that reason of no assistance to the defense. Hixenbaugh's story in substance was as follows: He lives in McMechen; has worked for the past twelve years on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, most of the time as conductor on freight trains. On last Sunday he was in charge of No. 56 freight, east bound, which registered its arrival at Roseby's Rock at 10:19 a. m. He did not know Fisher, the dead man. He saw him first at Moundsville, where he put him on his train. Later, when the train stopped at Roseby's Rock for water, he saw him on the bumper between two cars. The witness told Mr. Fisher to get off the train, but the latter refused to move. Hixenbaugh then went back to the caboose and got his "brake club." Coming back on the roof of the car on which Fisher was riding, he again ordered him off, but without effect. The "brake club," explained the witness, is used to knock off the head of a tramping so they will jump off to recover the head gear. He knocked off the hats of the two men with Fisher and they lost no time in jumping off. He then made a pass with the club at Fisher's hat, but the latter dodged the blow and fell off the car and was run over by the train, which the witness said was moving at the rate of about seven miles per hour. Hixenbaugh then dropped his stick and as soon as possible stopped his train. Before this could be done, however, the train was a mile away from the scene of the accident. Hixenbaugh ordered a brakeman to go back and look after the injured man, and then went on east with his train.

Colonel Arnett asked Hixenbaugh if he struck Fisher. This the witness denied doing. There had been no quarrel between the two men. On being questioned further, the witness said Fisher was intoxicated. He knew this because he caught the odor of whiskey. The colonel asked Hixenbaugh if he had murdered Fisher. This the witness vigorously denied. There had been no malice aforethought, no threats and no murderous intent.

Squire Criswell's decision was to hold Hixenbaugh for action by the next grand jury.

Colonel Arnett and Prosecuting Attorney Parsons were in conference yesterday afternoon and decided that the application before Judge Campbell in this city, for a writ of habeas corpus releasing Hixenbaugh on bond, would be argued this afternoon. The state will resist any attempt looking toward the release of the prisoner.
